Osmoflo expands into city corporate Office

Osmoflo Pty Ltd, Australia's largest locally owned desalination company has moved into new corporate headquarters in metropolitan Adelaide.

Conveniently located in the city centre at Level 4, 97 Pirie Street, the new offices will house business services, corporate development, business development and marketing functions. These were previously carried out at Osmoflo's operations, fabrication and test facility at Burton, in the northern suburbs.

The move reflects the latest phase of a planned expansion program aimed at consolidating Osmoflo's position as market leader in the design, manufacture and operation of reverse osmosis, membrane based desalination equipment for the industrial and public sectors. Since 1991 Osmoflo has produced almost 300 systems, ranging in size to 50 Megalitres per day.

Last year Osmoflo moved into a new design and fabrication complex at Burton. Sized in excess of 5000m², this is the largest facility in the southern hemisphere dedicated to the fabrication of reverse osmosis desalination equipment. It also includes a full test rig enabling "wet" testing of completed modules using rainwater collected and stored on-site and recycled after use.

Company growth has outstripped expectation and offices at that facility are now required for design, production, project management and operations staff, necessitating the need for the new corporate centre.

Recently, Osmoflo commenced a substantial recruitment drive which is offering job opportunities in Adelaide's north, an area of increasing unemployment due to cut backs in motor vehicles manufacturing and associated industries.

Some 30 jobs, including three senior management positions are currently available.

Osmoflo currently has around 120 employees and also supports an additional 50 positions in a contracting capacity.
